The Gilbertsen brothers seek to climb the highest peaks all over the world, and before coming to Saudi Arabia, they visited more than 110 countries to document the highest summit in each country, by using precise devices after climbing the mountains personally, and they are working on a project to climb the highest point in every country in the world

It is noteworthy that the Saudi Climbing Federation, "the official umbrella for the sport of hiking" in Saudi Arabia, was established by a decision of Turki Al-Sheikh, head of the Saudi Olympic Committee, and headed by Prince Bandar bin Khalid bin Fahd
